N750G was designed and constructed as an Experimental amateur-built aircraft and was not designed nor built to meet any standards of airworthiness as a standard certificated aircraft would. I was free to make modifications and changes as I wished, and I did both.

N750G was certified in the Experimental Amateur-Built Category and, as a result, it may or may not contain structural and/or design defects or inadequate and/or inappropriate materials or components, and that this builder log neither includes nor provides any assurances that adapting any of the information included in this builder log will result in an aircraft that is complete, airworthy, insurable, fit for service, or capable of being licensed or authorized for any flight, use, or operational activities of any kind or nature whatsoever. In other words, these logs may contain bad ideas that might result in injury or death if followed.
